

Privacy Policy

General

One Amherst Partners, LLC (“OAP”) respects your right to privacy.

Information Collection

OAP will collect personally identifiable and general information that you voluntarily provide through our website or via email correspondence, with the intent to improve our website and better meet your needs. Personally identifiable information includes such items as first and last name, business title, company name and address, or email address. General information includes items such as files you request, or responses to invitations.

Use of Information

OAP will use the information you supply to respond to your inquiries, supply you with requested materials and further OAP’s business activities. Authorized third parties may be utilized by Amherst to collect, track and process such personally identifiable or general information solely for the benefit of OAP. Your information will not be made available to any other third party.

Other Important Information

If required by law or if pertinent to judicial or government investigations, it may become necessary for OAP to release your personally identifiable information. In addition, OAP’s website may contain links to other websites. We do not accept the responsibility for the privacy policies of those websites.

OAP reserves the right to modify this privacy policy at any time, without advance notification. We will promptly reflect any such modifications on this page.
